

(...) However, the most notable point about this production is rather that subtle and evenly balanced execution by the excellent Polish Chamber Choir. This quality, in conjunction with Penderecki's style of writing which retains the same high level even in moments less personal could make a lover of choral music become absorbed in this disk (...)